

Conflagration in Jersey City Razes Entire City Block

Parts of Six Other Adjacent Blocks Also Destroyed by Flames which Baffle Efforts of Firemen for Over Six Hours—Near Panic Reigns in Neighborhood for First Hour—New York Fire Boats Help

Hundreds of Families Homeless

Two Score Sent to Hospitals for Treatment of Minor Cuts—Explosion Blows off Roof of Structure, Immediately Enveloping Building in Flames—Red Cross Active

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 14. — Fire, attended by numerous explosions, raged for six hours in the industrial section of the city before it could be brought under control today, destroying more than 30 buildings, sending two score persons to hospitals for treatment for minor injuries and making several hundred families homeless.

Fire Chief Boyle estimated the damage at approximately $1,000,000. The cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

A full square block was razed and portions of six other blocks immediately adjoining it were destroyed. Two-thirds of Jersey City's fire department fought the conflagration from 9 o'clock this morning to 6 o'clock this evening, when relief crews were put to the task of subduing the fire which smoldered in the ruins.

Two fire boats from New York helped keep the flames from the congested factory district on the North River front, while the reserve fire forces of the city, joined by companies from the adjoining cities of Hoboken, stood by for possible emergencies.

Residents Ordered From Area.

Dynamite had to be used to blast down a number of flimsy structures in the path of the flames. Police lines, manned by virtually the entire Jersey City force, were thrown about a district of six square blocks surrounding the fire. For the first hour of the fire something of a panic reigned as families in the stricken area, ordered to abandon their homes, ran about in wild confusion, seeking to save some of their belongings.

The noise of frequent explosions, which shattered windows of buildings within a half-mile radius, in addition to dense clouds of acid fumes and thick, black, chemical-laden smoke, added to the confusion and panic. The smoke clouds lay low, in spite of the brisk wind which drove the flames, and many were overcome as they made their way from the danger zone.

The fire started in a sub-cellar of the salt peter factory of the Battelle and Renwick company at Morris and Warren streets. When the firemen arrived they found a glowing furnace, which began to emit choking clouds of acid fumes as water was poured into the fire, causing a series of explosions.

On advice of Chief Boyle, Director of Public Safety Quinn ordered his police to set up fire lines and to compel all residents of neighboring tenements and flimsy wooden homes to leave the district. Just as the police had started this work an explosion blew the roof off the salt peter company's four-story building. The flames immediately swept over the building in waves and flaming fragments of the shattered roof fell on adjoining buildings and set them ablaze.

A dozen firemen, probably 30 men, women and children in neighboring houses, cut by flying glass or overcome by the chemical fumes, were rushed to hospitals or to emergency first aid stations set up in neighboring drug stores. A dozen ambulances clustered about the place. Red Cross nurses and volunteer physicians hastened to the scene with first aid kits. Within an hour the police had gotten the excited crowds in check, had removed all the injured and cleared the threatened area of all but firemen.

The flames leaped to surrounding tenements and ancient wooden structures housing workers of the district and soon enveloped the plants of the Richardson Chemical Co., the seven-story building of the Heppes Paper Box company, and, finally, the ten-story brick structure at Washington and Morris streets known as the Sugar building. It formerly was a factory of the Atlantic Sugar Refining company, but for the past few years had been used as a storage warehouse by the Colgate Soap company. It was destroyed to the accompaniment of a series of explosions as the fire reached several stores of chemicals in the basement. The Colgate company had several hundred thousands dollars worth of soaps, perfume, and other manufactured goods stored in the place.

The Sugar building fire menaced the main warehouse of the Colgate Co., and Fire Chief Boyle ordered a subsidiary telephone Manhattan for fireboats. The John Purry Mitchell and the William J. Gaynor responded, throwing streams from the Morris canal upon the buildings of the Colgate and other companies near the water front. Dynamiting also was resorted to at this point, and the flames were checked after a six-hour battle.

False Alarm Sent to New York

An unidentified man telephoned the New York department for "all available apparatus" and "fire boats" to the Manhattan fire department. The fire boats and crossed the river with 25 pieces of fire apparatus. They were turned back at the pier, however, the Jersey City fire officials explaining that the call had been unauthorized and the aid unnecessary. The police are seeking the man who telephoned.

With the coming of darkness, the fire permitted many of the families driven from the fire area to return to their homes. Several hundred men, women, and children, however, had been burned out and these were given food, clothing and beds in Jersey City armory. Red Cross workers, combined with Y. W. C. A. members and other semi-public organizations quickly organized a relief station under the telephone instructions of Mayor Hague, who was out of the city.

One woman, driven from her home by flames, Mrs. Helen McCann, was taken to police headquarters, which also was turned into an emergency hospital and there gave birth to a baby boy.

There was some looting during the first hours of the fire and two men were arrested.

Gov. Silzer Warns GRANGERS OF TAX

Says Levy on State and Municipal Bonds Would Immediately Raise Interest Rates

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 14. — Passage of a resolution before the National Grange to tax state and municipal bonds was declared a bad move by Governor Silzer, who advised the delegates to look carefully before jumping from one rail to another.

The governor also cautioned the delegates to forget party lines in the fight and pointed out that "if reproduction is helpful no party should stand in the way."

During the annual meeting of the Grange at Atlantic City, N. J., Governor Silzer said it was the "safest" thought, and sound exposition of the solution of the farmers' problem, and endorsed his selection as the next secretary of agriculture.

Turning to the proposal to tax state and municipal bonds and thus eliminate the exemption feature, Governor Silzer declared that if that is done, the amount of interest paid will have to be paid on bonds to build schools, roads, and make necessary improvements, and immediately go up. You will have to pay higher interest, and your tax bills will be increased proportionately.

GOV. SILZER WARNS BAN ON HUNTING LIFTED BY LUNN

Says Levy on State and Municipal Bonds Would Immediately Raise Interest Rates

Albany, Nov. 14. — The hunting season in New York state is open, and tonight hunters, rebuffed of their sport by the governor's proclamation banning hunting and camping, were streaking northward into the woods. The sport will be brief, however, for the deer season officially ends tomorrow in most sections of the state.

A proclamation signed by Governor George B. Lunn today lifted the ban on hunting and camping in the "fire towns" of the state preserves, after a general rain and, in some sections, snow, last night had drenched the woods, made timber dry and prolonged drought. Since October 21, the woods have been barred to hunters, the conservation commission holding that time finding it necessary to ask the governor to close the season until the fire danger was passed. In all sections of the state except in the towns of White, Schuylkill, and Jackson, Washington county, where the season did not open until November 7, now hunting may be continued until November 15.

BALANCE BOOKS AND THEN TALK OVER TAX CUTS

Administration Believes Nation Should Know Just Where it Stands Financially to Act Properly

NO EXTRA SESSION

Political Leaders Divided on Need of Convening New Congress March 4—President Does Not Favor Move

Washington, Nov. 14. — The administration does not feel that the question of tax reduction should be taken up until the government's books are balanced at the close of this fiscal year, which ends next June 30.

Until that time it is the opinion of President Coolidge that the actual amount of reduction possible cannot be determined, and scientific action is thus impossible.

Meanwhile the President has no intention of calling a special session of the new congress March 4.

It was stated today at the White House that he would not call a special session unless he considers it very necessary.

Taxation, the President feels, should be among the first problems to be considered by the new congress which, if not called into extra session, will meet for the first time in December, 1925.

Mr. Coolidge expects such farm legislation as is necessary to be enacted at the coming short session of congress.

Leaders Disagree on Special Session.

Administration spokesmen have consistently pointed out that an orderly program for further tax reduction is not possible until the surplus available for a cut is known. Likewise they have explained that the new tax law is just going into effect and the benefits accruing from it will be felt in the taxes payable next year.

In signing the new tax reduction bill, Mr. Coolidge made known his dislike of the provision for publicity of returns and also announced he wanted since he has indicated his desire to reduce further the higher surtaxes as well as the lower schedules.

White House Said Mr. Coolidge Does Not Want to Call a Session at All.

While it was stated today at the White House that Mr. Coolidge does not want to call a session at all, considerable pressure for an extra session is expected to be brought by some of the congressional leaders. Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, yesterday urged such a session. Other Republican leaders, however, including Senator Wadsworth of New York; Messrs. New Hampshire; and Watson, Indiana, have declared against such a call.

L. C. C. APPROVES LEASE OF CUTOFF

New York Central Bridge at Castle-on Will Be Named "A. H. Smith Memorial Bridge"

New York, Nov. 14. — The Interstate Commerce commission has approved the lease of the Hudson River Connecting railroad by the New York Central railroad, according to information received today at the office of the latter company here from Washington.

The Hudson Connecting railroad is the corporate title of a New York Central subsidiary which it constitutes the "eastern coast" by means of which freight traffic over the main line will be diverted from steep grades and congested points at Albany, and shunted across a high level bridge over the Hudson, to be named the "A. H. Smith Memorial Bridge," located just south of Castle-on. The cutoff includes 25 miles of new double track railroad connecting the New York Central Hudson division at Sayrevot, the West Shore at Ravena, and the Boston & Albany at Post Road, and the large terminal freight classification yards at Schenck. The whole improvement cost $25,000,000 and has been two years in construction.

The cutoff will be put into operation next Thursday, when the first train will cross the bridge, carrying the board of directors and other officials of the New York Central, officials of the states of Massachusetts and New York and of the federal government.

Body Buried, However, in Consecrated Ground—Two Pals Smash Cameras and Plates of News Photographers

Chicago, Nov. 14. — Amidst a pomp and splendor, Dion O'Bannon, ruthless leader of Chicago gangland, gunman, beer runner, and hijacker, was carried to the grave today by his associates.

Gangland, hushed and decorous, with latter enemies standing shoulder to shoulder, attended the funeral of this queer anomaly of pistols and pistols, shot down last Monday by three gunmen as he stood among the roses of his flower shop behind whose respectability his operations were cloaked.

Denied the offices of the Catholic church, the friends of the notorious gangster surrounded the services with all the elaborate display that a lavish outpouring of money could buy to give grace to the funeral. It was one of the most pretentious spectacles of its kind in Chicago's history.

Twenty Trucks Carry Flowers.

The services were brief. A hymn was followed by a funeral dirge by a stringed orchestra hidden behind a great bank of chrysanthemums placed about the $10,000 silver casket, almost hidden by the mountain of flowers. Then came another hymn and pious apologies as they tread on each other's toes, began filing slowly past the casket.

Then, the casket was lifted from its bed of flowers and carried to a motor hearse by eight associates of O'Bannon, including Louis Alterio, his lieutenant, on whose shoulders his mantle of power is reported to have descended.

Twenty trucks were packed high with the floral offerings which included a gigantic heart of pink roses from O'Bannon's widow and a seven-foot pillar of carnations and peonies from a Mrs. O'Bannon.

Scores of elaborate floral pieces were sent anonymously.

Cameras and Plates Confiscated.

Skirting Chicago's business district the funeral cortege, traveling 30 miles an hour, headed for Mt. Carmel cemetery. The long procession included scores of sleek limousines in which rode O'Bannon's enemies as well as trucks bearing the more solemnly as a priest and the body was lowered into the ground under a blanket of roses.

Scarcely had the casket disappeared when O'Bannon's pals of other days, with hardening faces, turned to more accustomed affairs. Two of them, spying newspaper photographers on a scaffold snapping pictures of the scene climbed the scaffold, and, as the photographers scurried for safety, smashed the plates and confiscated the cameras.

Meanwhile the police were trying to fathom the mystery surrounding the slaying. Michael Corcoran, head of the Street Cleaners' union, and said to have been friendly with O'Bannon went to the funeral and then surrendered to the police, who had been hunting the city over for him. He was released after questioning.

RAIL EXECUTIVES TO STUDY COMBINES

Pennsylvania and New York Said to Want Control of Lehigh Valley in Regrouping Plans

New York, Nov. 14. — Executives of the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, and Nickel Plate railroads, which would form the nucleus for the four great trunk line systems of the east under a plan recently presented to the Interstate Commerce commission will meet here next week to consider a revision of the regrouping proposal.

Opposition to the Pennsylvania railroad to the original plan is expected to result in the suggestion from the other roads that it be allotted control of or trackage rights over the Lackawanna or Lehigh Valley to provide direct access to Buffalo.

Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania, favors the allocation of the Lehigh Valley to his system, with joint control over the Lackawanna by the New York Central and Nickel Plate. The New York Central, on the other hand, is understood to be angling for the Lehigh Valley, proposing that the Pennsylvania and Nickel Plate share trackage rights over the Lackawanna.

B. & M. CONDUCTORS MAY BE INVOLVED IN FRAUD

Boston, Nov. 14. — Investigation of the plot by which tickets on the Boston & Maine railroad have been sold by conductors for two years in lieu of being cancelled was being made in greater Boston today, with a view of rounding up the conductors and other persons involved.

A statement taken from the office of President James H. Houtz said it appeared the railroad's losses had been substantial and that several conductors had been paid for tickets which had been cancelled. The railroad said it was not sure if the conductors had been paid for tickets which had been cancelled.

NEW MAIL ROUTE BEING PLANNED

Air Service Will Fly Between New York and Chicago in Eight to Nine Hours

New York, Nov. 14. — The government has blazed the trail for an eight- to nine-hour over-night airmail service between New York and Chicago, both ways. It was disclosed today by Carl F. Gage, general superintendent of the post office department's air mail division.

Routes have been mapped; terminals, with stations, and emergency fields are being acquired; machines, and personnel have been assigned, and all the potential lighting equipment for night flight is being set up.

Colonel Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster general, has ordered the new service installed early next spring, probably in April. This, said Mr. Gage, will give the government a "double track" air mail system between here and Chicago and, with a transcontinental service covering 2,720 miles, will make a total of 1,905 miles over which night flying will be continuous.

Night mail will leave the New York air terminal at 10 p. m., reaching Chicago nine hours later for distribution, with the first regular delivery. Night mail will leave the Chicago air terminal at 9 a. m., reaching New York eight hours later, also for the day's first delivery. Due to prevailing winds, the westward flight will be an hour longer.

Mr. Gage pointed out that the best mail train time between the two cities now is 20 hours, and virtually two days are lost in the transaction of business by train mail, but with the air mail, he said, a 10-hour service from post office to post office will be maintained. Letters mailed at the close of business in a terminal city or any intervening air mail station will be at destination for the opening of business the next day.

Postal rates will be eight cents an ounce, the present air mail rate for some 1, which includes Chicago.

NAVY TO USE HULL OF SHIP AS TARGET

Supreme Court of District of Columbia Rules It Cannot Hear Suit to Stop Such Action

Washington, Nov. 14. — Plans for using the hull of the former battleship Washington as a target will be carried out tomorrow, regardless of the appeal filed by counsel for William B. Shearer of New York, from the decision of Justice Hitz in the supreme court of the district of Columbia, upholding the departmental authority for thus disposing of the vessel.

Notation of an appeal did not act as a stay in the case, the secretary said.

Without waiting for argument on the petition itself, the court today accepted the government's motion to dismiss the case, and declared the plaintiff was without equity in the premises and the court lacked jurisdiction to entertain his plea.

Navy tugs are enroute to Philadelphia to tow the Washington to the experiment site near the Chesapeake capes.

STATE SOLDIER BONUS NOT AVAILABLE TO DEPENDENTS

New York, Nov. 14. — The Appellate division today decided that no state bonus can be collected by the widow, children or other relatives of a soldier who enlisted in New York state for the World war and died between the time the constitutional amendment providing for the bonus was adopted and the enactment of the law making it effective.

The decision was rendered in the case of Mrs. Margaret Craig in behalf of her niece and nephew, Isabelle and Luke Milligan, aged 14 and 12, respectively. Patrick Milligan, father of the children, was an honorably discharged soldier of the 16th Infantry. He died on April 27, 1924, of pneumonia.

DEFENSE TEARS AT GOVERNMENT OIL LEASE CASE

Attorney Declares Charge of Bribery by Doheny of Fall "Most Inconceivable Thing Charged at Bar"

CITES FRIENDSHIP

Says Two Men Had Known Each Other 30 Years—Asks "Does Bribed Official Give Briber Promissory Note?"

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 14. — The government charges that E. L. Doheny's loan of $100,000 to former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, late in 1922, was a bribe through which the oil magnate's company, the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, obtained a lease and contracts valued at $100,000,000, was described in technical court here today as "the most unbelievable and inconceivable thing that has ever been charged at the bar."

The attack upon the government's allegation was made by Frank J. Hogan, arguing questions of fact for the defense at the trial of the government's suit for cancellation of the lease and contracts with the Pan-American company.

"Does a bribed official give or send to a briber a promissory note for the bribe?" the attorney questioned, after having pictured a friendship of 30 years between Doheny and Fall, and having described the motives underlying Doheny's offer to help Fall.

The $100,000 loan was the anchor of the government's case, which has collapsed because the charge is both unfounded and unproved, Hogan asserted.

Says Roosevelt Revamped Order.

The particular emphasis by government counsel in yesterday's arguments upon the fact that E. L. Doheny, Jr., delivered the loan to Fall, also was attacked in the defense arguments.

"Is there any normal father in all the land who was going to bribe a public official and imperil his reputation and character who would select his only son to carry the bribe?" the attorney asked. "The selection of that only son was the very indication that the man who sent the money this the man who sent the money."

"In his mind which was evil or corrupt?" The loan, Hogan argued, was entirely personal.

Referring to the executive order of May 31, 1921, transferring control of the naval oil reserve from the navy to the interior department, Hogan asserted that this was drafted by E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior, revamped by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, and by the latter carried to the President for signature.

Attacks Conspiracy Charge.

He remarked on the absence of the names of the former secretary of the interior, Albert B. Ball, from the schedule of events.

Attacking the conspiracy charge in the government's bill of complaint, the attorney said:

"It was utilized for two purposes, first to besmirch the character of certain people, and second, to change the political complexion of the country. In the first it was temporary successful; in the second it was disastrously unsuccessful."

Hogan asserted that prior to the Fall machine in the interior department, the government's naval oil lands had lain idle while adjacent private company holdings drained the underlying reserves of fuel. He said he did not criticize the private companies in this regard, but he did criticize the government officials responsible and added:

"Somebody slumbered while this golden stream poured out of the naval oil reserves."

Can One Man Star in Both?

By Feg Murray

"OVIE" OVERALL—FAMOUS CALIFORNIA FOOTBALL STAR, AND PITCHER FOR THE CUBS.

Do football and baseball mix? Can an athlete star successfully in both sports? Why do so many All-American football stars who also shine in college baseball fail to deliver when they are given a trial in the major leagues? I believe that football and baseball do mix, and that the number of men who have been expert players in both sports proves this conclusively. The reason that so many "football heroes" flop when they go into big time baseball is that either they were signed for the majors mostly on their football reputation or that the wear and tear of the gridiron incapacitated them for real diamond usage. On the other hand, many big league baseball stars were gridiron heroes while at school, though not all of them were signed by clubs because of their football reputation. Frank Frisch and Eddie Collins, two of baseball's greatest second basemen, starred as football players in college. Frisch at Fordham and Collins at Columbia. The one and only "Matty" was a great ground gaining player for Bucknell college, and his running featured a great drawing card, but warmed the bench so much that he didn't have a chance to improve the way he should. He is still playing professional baseball and football. Many men who were remarkable athletes in both football and baseball never went into professional diamond careers. Eddie Mahan, Charlie Dickley and George Owen of Harvard, Ted Jones, Ted Coy, LaGore and Mac Aldrich of Yale, and Sam White of Princeton all excelled in both sports.

A cripple entered the room, dropped a handful of coins and groaned as he stooped to pick them up. Fisher, unwillingly helped him when he arose the cripple had departed with a wallet from Fisher's coat, containing jewelry valued at $5,000.

IRISH BOUNDARY NOW IN DISPUTE

Ulster Unwilling to Surrender Area Demanded by Free State.

Washington, D. C.—"The complicated Irish boundary question, now stirring Ireland and England, has numerous aspects, any one of which might be responsible for the present disagreements," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

The bulletin deals with the region along the boundary line between the Irish Free State, or southern Ireland, and Ulster or northern Ireland. The desire of the Free State to add to its territory portions of the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh, as it has already added the former Ulster counties of Monaghan, Donegal and Cavan, constitutes the present problem. Ulster is unwilling to surrender the additional territory.

"Ulster, in the northeastern corner of Ireland, is in the odd position of being a part of Ireland which is in large part not Irish," says the bulletin. "Three hundred years ago the British King James I, with the desire to Anglicize a part of Ireland, decided to 'plant' a colony of English and Scotch. What is known as the Ulster plantation followed.

"Other 'plantations' had been attempted in southern Ireland without accomplishing anything save suffering to the natives and loss to the 'undertakers,' as the imported landlords were termed. But the Ulster plantation took root and flourished.

Scotch Blood Dominant in Ulster. "The original plan of the king was to have English settlers dominant in Ulster; but he also permitted the Scotch to participate. English settlers were not easily interested, however, while the Scotch flocked in, making the plantation dominantly Scottish. By 1690 the population of Ulster consisted of some 50,000 inhabitants of Scotch blood, 3,000 of English ancestry, and 40,000 Irish. Altogether probably about 100,000 Scotchmen moved to Ulster. The English were soon merged with the Scotch but the Irish and Scotch strains remained almost entirely independent.

"Ulster offers economically from the rest of Ireland. Either the Scotch immigrants had a greater propensity toward industry or their economic conditions were more favorable. At any rate Ulster has become the marked industrial region of Ireland while the remainder of the country, save in the larger cities, has not followed this line of development.

"Theoretically Ulster has a greater proportion of Highland than most other parts of Ireland, but a large part of the land is in cultivation. Flax is sown everywhere, especially in the eastern counties. In the neighborhood of Belfast, the great world center of the linen industry.

"The severest border between the Irish Free State and the State of Northern Ireland, created in 1920 and 1921, extends through a rather rough country. Dundalk on the east coast, is just south of the line. Near this city is one of the passes through the hills used since earliest times in Ireland, and because of this situation Dundalk's neighborhood has been the scene of numerous battles. Further west the boundary touches the long, deep valley in which lies Lough Erne, the longest and the next largest lake in Ireland.

Ulster Has Shrunk. "Formerly Ulster consisted of the northern tier of counties from coast to coast. When the two self-governing states were formed, however, Donegal, largest of the Ulster counties, occupying the northwestern corner of Ireland, was attached to the Free State. The boundary of the State of Northern Ireland therefore does not now reach the Atlantic but turns at its southwestern corner a few miles short of the coast and runs northeastward between Donegal on the west and Fermanagh, Tyrone and Londonderry on the east to Lough Foyle, an inlet at the very top of the island. The State of Northern Ireland, therefore, occupies only a small segment in the northeastern corner of Ireland. Readjustment of the boundary as desired by the Free State would concentrate the northern division still closer into the northeast corner.

"Though small in territory the State of Northern Ireland has a concentrated population. Its area is less than one-sixth that of Ireland but it contains more than a quarter of the island's inhabitants. "The United States has more than an academic interest in all that affects Ireland. Two of the most important streams of immigration that have reached America came from the island: one the so-called Scotch-Irish from Ulster; the other, the Irish from south of the Ulster line. The Scotch-Irish early felt the weight of repressive English laws both in the religious and economic fields. They began emigrating to America in large numbers during the latter part of the Eighteenth century and it is estimated that they made up one-sixth of all the colonists by the time of the American Revolution. They were prominent in that struggle and later became the frontiersmen, playing an important part in winning the Middle West and the West. "The main stream of immigration from southern Ireland took place in the Nineteenth century. The genius of the programme for politics has made itself felt in local, state and national governments."

Sunday Is Luckiest Day. The Rumanians regard Sunday as the luckiest day for a wedding, and the autumn, when the wine is in, as the most suitable season.

His Nose Broken. In a fight with a schoolfellow, Thackeray, the famous novelist, had his nose broken and the disfigurement lasted all his life.

Fishermen Use Ancient Boats. Boats now used by the salmon fishermen of Wales are of the type of the skin-covered coracles used by the Britons 2,000 years ago.

Turkeys for Export. The Italians breed turkeys by the thousands, but they are intended chiefly for export, very few being eaten in that country.

Four Famous Rivers. Four famous American rivers, the Rio Grande, the Arkansas, the Colorado and the Platte, have their origin in Colorado.

Poetry Is Cheap. Remember, young man, that your best girl can buy better ready-made poems than you could write in a thousand years.

RED SIGNAL LIGHT LEADS ALL IN TEST

Green, Blue and Lemon Come Next in Order.

Washington.—That red signal lights are most easily distinguished from other colors at a distance and require the lowest light intensity for unmistakable recognition, is one of the conclusions drawn from an investigation of the visibility of traffic signals conducted by the bureau of standards, Department of Commerce. Green signals came second on the list of colored lights easy to identify, but for street traffic a yellow green is considered preferable to the blue green used on the railroads. Blue ranked third on the list, but was found to require the highest intensity. The railroad yellow, it was found, were often mistaken for orange and red, and a lemon yellow gave much better results.

Several thousand observations were made at a distance of 600, 900 and 1,200 feet, using different observers. They were made under daylight conditions, under which the identification of colored lights is most difficult. On the average, a red light of 75-candle power could be identified at 600 feet, while a green light had to be of 250-candle power, a yellow 750 and a blue light 1,000. At 900 feet the requirements were 100, 250 and 1,500-candle power respectively, while at 1,200 feet they were 1,500, 2,500, 3,000 and 7,500.

The tests are a part of a program of standardization of colors for traffic signals in which the bureau is co-operating with the American Engineering Standards committee, the National Safety council and the American Association of State Highway Officials. Under the auspices of these organizations a committee has been formed which has now nearly completed a code for colors of traffic signals and for lights for building exits. This problem includes the use of colored lights on highway vehicles, along highways, and at highway crossings of steam and electric railways; the co-ordinated relation of color, form, position and number of signals and their relation to systems of flashing, moving, or other lights; and methods of specifying or defining colors for signal purposes.

World's Largest Sapphire Is Valued at $35,000

London.—Declared to be the largest sapphire in the world, a jewel, once used as a common paper weight, has been brought from India and is now being offered for exhibition in London.

The jewel is worth more than $35,000, weighs 916 carats and is in the form of a plucked flower with a short stem. It was acquired by a government official in India, who, ignorant of its value, used it as a paper weight in one of the guard huts on the Indian frontier.

The discovery of the jewel was made by the director of Indian revenue when he visited the outpost. Its history has been traced to the Twelfth century when one of the Bellala kings, while on a pilgrimage to Ceylon, was given the sapphire by a Buddhist monk. During the reign of this king the stone became the object of much veneration and was afterward captured by Malik Kafur, the great general of Allaudin. Later it came into the possession of a state official, but was lost about 1875.

Experts are of the opinion that the jewel was a hair ornament of an ancient deity, and there is, it is believed, a companion stone in existence.

Dog Kills Pet Fawn

Charlotteburg, N. J.—Because an eight-week-old fawn had the affections of children of Thomas W. Reilly, superintendent of the Newark watershed, Rags, a wire-haired terrier, driven to desperation by jealousy, killed the fawn. The dog followed the deer into the woods near the Reilly home and attacked it. The dog was called off, but the fawn did not survive.

Golf AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

Is it correct to keep one eye closed when putting? Why or why not?

By LEO DIEGEL.
Canadian open champion, 1924. H. H. open champion, 1921. Shawnee open champion, 1921.

Keep both eyes open while putting. I have never seen a good putter who putted with one eye closed. All the star putters, such as Hazen, McLeod, Dever and Outslut, putt with both eyes wide open.

A golf ball at rest is a fixed object to be struck and should be hit with as much help from the eyes as possible. The eyes should be kept on the ball—not the hole. By using only one eye the proper perspective is destroyed and a golfer puts himself under a fifty per cent handicap which is both foolish and unnecessary. Naturally, if you have a long established habit of putting with one eye closed and are a successful putter, do not try to change your style.

FOR SUFFERING HUMANITY

Readers of The Star have not forgotten Golden Rule Sunday, as observed a year ago, when in the midst of plenty in this prosperous land of ours, all were asked to serve in their homes the simple meal of a Near East Relief orphan, and then, understanding more fully what such a meal is, and what these orphans have for their daily food and are thankful for, to give as much as their means permitted to the child welfare and educational work in the Near East.

This was done in hundreds of thousands of homes, and as a result many hundreds of thousands of dollars were raised for what is unquestionably one of the most wonderful of works for suffering humanity. This year a similar day of observance has been planned, and December 7 will be International Golden Rule Sunday.

Great as the work which was done last year, it was by no means finished when as results of a plan which brought directly home to every one a sense of individual need on the part of these little ones, food, silver and gold and paper money were added to the fund. Much was certainly accomplished, but much more remains to be done. There are now in round numbers 100,000 children at this time in the refugee camps of Greece alone. Half of these are orphans or half orphans. Impoverished Greece, ruined by war, has upon her hands a refugee army, children and adult, equal at least to one fifth of her total population, and is physically and financially unable to handle the situation. Unless the outside world comes generously to the rescue, thousands of these orphaned children will die the coming winter.

The cost of care, sustenance and training for these orphans in Relief camps is but $5 per month, of $60 per year. If this is the little cost of a human life, can it be possible that any one in affluent America will withhold the giving hand in such emergency?

Under these circumstances The Star calls attention three weeks ahead to Golden Rule Sunday, and urges its readers by partaking of a simple dinner on that day to come closer into touch with what is the daily life of Christian refugees in the Near East. And when this has been done, it ventures to assert that they will be able more fully to appreciate the suffering of these little ones, and more generously to respond to the appeal which on their behalf is made.

CHURCH AND COMMUNITY.

"The church," we are told, often nowadays, "has lost its power. The life has gone out of it. It is no longer a force in the community. It is dead."

Consider, then, the situation in the thriving little city of Cape Girardeau, Mo., which according to a national directory has 10,000 people and numerous churches, foundries, factories making cigars, handkerchiefs, boxes, shoe-making machines and stoves, cooperage works, stone crushers, brick and lumber yards, cement works, and the usual outfit of stores, banks and other business institutions.

The stranger arriving there is greeted by a sign which reads: "Ladies' Union—City of Cape Girardeau, Mo. 10,000 people and numerous churches, foundries, factories making cigars, handkerchiefs, boxes, shoe-making machines and stoves, cooperage works, stone crushers, brick and lumber yards, cement works, and the usual outfit of stores, banks and other business institutions."

The church then challenges attention. The inquiring visitor soon discovers that it is no mere idle boast or sentimental touch. The citizens have united in a movement to make the church really dominant in the life of their city.

They have a fund for that purpose, raised by public subscription. They set forth the claims of their religious institutions in their religious newspapers and in systematic newspaper advertising the year round. There is a year the daily papers give a dinner at which pastors and representative laymen discuss plans for concerted church work. Budgets, attendance and miscellaneous activities are all increasing steadily. And there is harmony in the city.

That city, not to mention law, order, morals, education and civic progress. "And the denominational running all this," some inquirer may ask. Well, the chairman of the church promotion organization is a Protestant, the secretary is a Catholic, and the largest contributors is a Jew.

Examination in Postal Service.

The United States Civil Service commission announces that there will be an open competitive examination at the Oneonta post office on Saturday, December 6, for the position of clerk-carrier in the office in this city. While there are at present no vacancies in the service in Oneonta, it is the purpose of the department to establish an eligible list from which it is expected that certifications will be made to fill future vacancies. Competitors will be examined in five subjects: weight being given to their papers as follows: spelling, 10 points; penmanship, 20 points; copying, 20 points; letter writing, 20 points; arithmetic, 20 points; a total of 100. Two hours are allowed for the examination.

For full information and application blanks application can be made at the Oneonta post office. Applications must be received by the commission but not their 40th birthday on the date of the examination.

"Did you convince your audience?" "Yes, exactly," admitted Senator Benjamin.

"It looked to me as though you had started an argument among the folks that didn't even decide when it was time for my train to pull out," Washington Star.

EDITORIAL CLIPPINGS

The Rural School.
Millions were voted Tuesday by people of Pennsylvania cities and some of the larger boroughs and townships for creation of great high schools and in some communities, as in Harrisburg, educational facilities of splendid scope will be provided. But in the long list of bond issues approved at the polls are not many having for their object the betterment of the rural school, the one room, little red school house of erection, song and story.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

An Automobile Menagerie.
For several weeks the motor patrol has been causing dozens of arrests in western counties, charging Pennsylvania with operating automobiles under Ohio license. The offenders, who are said to be on the blacklist at Harrisburg, are operators unable to obtain a Keystone license because in the past they have violated the code. The Pennsylvania laws forbid any person whose license has been revoked in this state to drive under foreign registry.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Against the Soviet.
Under her new government Great Britain's attitude toward Soviet Russia promises to be similar to that of the United States. Both regard the Communists who are in control at Moscow as enemies of the social order and of enlightened government. Whether or not the alleged Zinovieff letter, urging the undermining of the loyalty of the British army and navy, is genuine, there is no doubt that the sentiments expressed are typical of the Moscow Communists.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Dictionary.
Of all words and all words the cross-word species is the most dangerously near to education. Why the people have risen so eagerly to this particular form of mental jax is one of the mysteries of mass psychology. The sport is obviously sincere; it is true that nobody is a hypocrite in his pleasures. At any rate, it is hard to find a person just now who is not inebriated with the exuberance of the dictionary.—New York Herald Tribune.

Fuel and Water Power.
The truce today in the coal fields will not endure forever. The great problems of fuel and water-power resources must be attacked in earnest or there will be trouble around some turn in the road. A national policy for fuel and water powers should be laid down during the next two years. A wise and far-seeing program will do much to keep radically from growing a new set of fangs.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

European Dollar Diplomacy.
Little by little the nonsense which has raised a temporary wall of intolerance between the French and the Germans is being buried by the operation of sound common sense. The steel combine between the capitalists of both countries is an illustration.—Brooklyn Eagle.

What Body of Yours?
By James W. Barton, M.D.
WHY NEW CULTS SOMETIMES SCORE.

Someone has asked the question why have so many forms of healing sprung up in the last few years? It is because the "regular" physician has not kept pace with medical knowledge.

Not the regular medical man today knows vastly more than his predecessors. The wiping out of the plague, yellow fever, malaria, and the control of typhoid, diphtheria, tuberculosis and so forth, more than answers that question.

But the physician of today in his pursuit of the cause of disease is unrelenting in his endeavor to locate this cause. The patient is simply the host, or individual who happens to have the illness.

And so when he treats the illness he frequently forgets, or does not take into consideration, the patient himself.

Now this doesn't suit the average patient, because he or she wants to talk about the illness, more than the physician cares to listen, and unless the physician has an unusually big reputation, the patient is dissatisfied.

This of course is not the case always, but one of the most outstanding physicians in America, bases his success upon his knowledge of human nature, and not upon his knowledge of medicine.

Now what is my point?

That many of the practitioners of the new "systems" or "cults" have cultivated the art of salesmanship, they have acquired a good working knowledge of human nature.

Now is this wrong?

Not by any means in many cases, because one of their needs is the feeling of optimism they impart to the patient, which goes a long way in the treatment of nervous or chronic cases.

Further, by seeing the patient frequently the patient feels that he is getting more attention, whereas the regular physician, hesitates to make what he terms "unnecessary" calls.

The danger of course with the irregular or new cult physician, is that often he has not had sufficient training to permit him to handle that precious thing the human body.

But this study of the patient, his inclinations and disposition, might be of help to the regular physician in getting better results.

Senator Walter L. Brown leaves this morning on the sleeper for Owego, where he this morning will attend a pancake breakfast given at the Ahwaga hotel by Senator Platt. A successor to Chauncey M. Depew as United States senator will be discussed.

Bishop Burke of Albany confirmed a class of about 40 members at St. Mary's church yesterday.

E. D. Lewis, who has been ill for two weeks, is again at his post at the jewelry store of C. E. Ford.

Rev. John H. Brandow will preach the annual Thanksgiving day sermon at the First Presbyterian church on November 29th.

With 43 cases on the calendar of the supreme court at Cooperstown, not a case was ready for trial yesterday and the trial jury was discharged.

The annual business meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society will be held at the home of Mrs. William H. Morris.

And at Thanksgiving and Christmas ardent admirers send to the biggest turkeys and the presidential table—and dignified!

WITH the election over, the immediate political grudge abating attention in the capital is:

"What will the Budget get out of it?"

For the option seems wasteful, says the Budget, and the Budget will be added to the list of official household.

But in what capacity? As cabinet officer? As secretary of state? Or what? Everybody's guessing, but no one knows.

Why, naturally, he has been proposed for permanent general or secretary of commerce. What other Cabinet or better thing on the subject has not been discussed.

Remember have been current that Postmaster General New would not be included in Coolidge's cabinet, but that to partly counterbalance the criticism that the post will be added to place one guaranty of Coolidge's choice, and that New might like to withdraw to build funds for the 1936 senatorial fight in Indiana.

WISD will say now that Calvin Coolidge hasn't a real sense of humor? On the very day after his overwhelming election, he turns a "production of Thanksgiving."

BAPTISTS WILL MEET

Four Associations to Consider Appointment of Director For Work Among Small Churches—May Discuss Children's Home.

Next Monday morning, November 17, at 11 o'clock, the ministers of Oneonta and vicinity Baptist churches will meet in the Baptist church at this place. All Baptist leaders of the four associations, Franklin, Otsego, Worcester and Deposit, are invited to attend.

The meeting will be in charge of Rev. F. W. Thomlinson, head of the department of town and country work among the Baptists. An important matter to be considered is that of uniting these four associations into a district for the purpose of better carrying on the church work.

The state has already been divided into districts and directors have been chosen for some of them and the results have been found to be satisfactory. The plan is a new one within the denomination and has been planned somewhat after that of the Methodists of the district superintendent.

At this meeting it is expected that the four associations will discuss the operation of the new scheme and are looking forward with great hopes for its results.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance of those who have so strongly urged the need of a Baptist Children's home in the four associations, but it is probable this matter will not be decided until the annual meeting in February.

THE GUIDE POST—

BY Henry and Tertius VanDyke

My Conscience and Your Conduct
Why is my liberty judged by another's conscience?—I Cor. 10:28.

It is a curious thing that many people who have strong conscientious scruples about certain forms of conduct readily assume that all people ought to share those scruples.

They either forget that the other people have their own consciences, or else, forsooth, conclude that they must be violators of conscience because they do not obey the conscience of their critics!

No one can complain if I obey my own conscience.

In fact, most men greatly admire the man who obeys his conscience. Sometimes, indeed, as Socrates reminds us, this leads to inevitable conflict between the individual and society.

That is one of the chances of life. But I do not see my conscience as the standard for all men. I only betray myself as an egotist and a fool.

The blunders of most enthusiastic souls originate here.

We demand uniformity of thought and conduct rather than personal consecration.

My business as a Christian is to draw men to Christ and not to demand that they conform either to my convictions or prejudices.

The only value my conscience has for other people is to bring them face to face with their own consciences.

Your conduct is not subject to my conscience.

But don't forget you have a conscience of your own.

BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Gun in hands of Gilbert Decker causes fatal injury to leg of Morris Scanlon at Cooperstown Junction.

Cooperstown Junction, Nov. 14. — Morris Scanlon, 16 years old, is confined to his home in this place suffering from a severe wound in his left leg caused by the discharge of a shotgun in the hands of Gilbert Decker, late this afternoon.

Although the shot penetrated to the bone, young Scanlon walked to the home of his parents and told his father, John Scanlon, that he had hurt himself by falling over a hoop. As Mr. Scanlon is said to be somewhat near-sighted, the seriousness of the injury did not impress itself upon him and it was not until late in the evening that it was discovered that the boy was seriously injured. Dr. E. C. Winsor was called and when he arrived he quickly saw that the injury was a gunshot wound and then for the first time, young Scanlon told the real story of how he suffered the hurt.

It appears that Scanlon and Decker, together with several other boys, had planned to go skunk hunting last night. Decker, accompanied by the other boys and carrying a shotgun, approached the Scanlon home and when within about four feet of young Scanlon, in some undetermined manner, he fired the shotgun, the shot entering the boy's leg.

Dr. Winsor dressed the wound and administered tetanus serum to guard as far as possible against complications. The injured boy was reported to be resting as comfortably as could be expected at his home last night.

In Memoriam

In sad and loving memory of Allen Lewis Johnson who passed away Nov. 10, 1924.

When God gave you to me Allen, To tend and rear and care, With love, my heart received you, I thought to keep you there.

Alas, my little boy, You only to me were given, Just to know and love, And rear you dear, for Heaven.

You were so sweet, so pure, Ere sun or stain could mar, Your spotless soul went back to God, Beyond the Gates of Ajar.

Though my eyes are dimmed with tears, And my heart is rent with woe, I know He took you, dear, Because He loves you so.

I would not ask you to return, For I know you are home, And I shall meet you again, Mother and Father.

INDIANS SUE TEXAS FOR BIG LAND TRACT

File Title Claim to Acreage Value of $150,000,000.

Tyler, Texas.—As another legal step in prosecution of their claim to title to 1,500,000 acres of land in eastern Texas, the Cherokee Indians, through their attorney, John M. Taylor of Claremore, Okla., have filed for record in the county clerk's office here a complete abstract and description of the property involved. The value of the land at this time is placed at about $150,000,000. It is made up of many fine farms, thriving communities and towns.

The Cherokee claim to have obtained the territory outlined by treaty dated November 8, 1822, with the Mexican government, and assert the twenty rights acquired from the Mexicans were recognized by the republic of Texas, Sam Houston, and other representatives of the republic, acting for Texas.

Asserting the white settlers, for no reason other than that they wanted the Indians' land, forcefully dispossessed the Cherokees in 1830, using Texas rangers for the purpose and engaging in warfare against them, the remaining tribe of the Cherokees declares that it still holds title to the country described.

The claims involved in the instrument just filed have been pending for years before both federal and state governments. The notice for filing the abstract and history of the claim for record in the county clerk's office here is not known.

Students of early Texas history declare the republic of Texas never legally ratified any agreement made by Sam Houston and others with the Cherokees and that, even had the treaty been ratified, it expired upon the outbreak of a state of war between the Cherokee tribe and the republic of Texas, which culminated in the bloody battle of Little Rock, Cherokee county, in 1839, when the power of the Cherokees was broken after a determined fight.

Pharaoh of the Exodus

Had Hardened Arteries

New York.—Examination of Egyptian mummies has revealed that the pharaoh of the exodus had hardened arteries, while Ramesses V suffered from a skin affliction suggestive of scaly skin. Prof. G. Elliot Smith, Egyptologist of University College, London, said recently in an address at the Academy of Medicine, Cancer, rheumatism and mastoiditis were common 4,000 years ago. Professor Smith declared, and although thousands of human bodies have been unearthed, only one case of gout and one of leprosy were discovered. Tuberculosis was extremely rare, while rickets, he said, was entirely absent, the mummy found in the pyramids had suffered from cancer.

It is not the only thing that makes a man's stomach well, but it is one of the most important. The stomach is the foundation of the body, and if it is not well, the whole system is affected. The best way to keep the stomach well is to eat a regular, healthy diet, and to avoid overeating and drinking. The stomach is a very sensitive organ, and it needs to be treated with care. Once Famous Violinist

Playing in Streets

Pittsburgh.—Back in 1908 Peter van der Meer played a violin recital in Carnegie Music hall, New York, and critics acclaimed the artist in his performance of Paganini's Concerto in D Major. He had studied under Ysaye at Antwerp and Brussels, and had been a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Recently a group of men idling about the entrance to the Fort Pitt hotel saw a blind street musician preparing to play. To them he was just a gypsy-like fiddler.

But upon examining him, they gathered as the strains of Schumann's "Träumerei" came sweetly from the instrument in the hands of the sightless player. "Evening Star" from "Tannhäuser," "Sous le vent" by Dreda, a Drego Serenade, the prison scene from "Il Trovatore," and the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" followed for a two-hour program.

Bill folds were opened and the battered hat held more than $50 when the collection was over.

The blind player was Peter van der Meer, sightless since 1915 when catarracts followed measles in a prolonged illness. For six years he was in Bellevue hospital, New York, where physicians told him he would never see again.

He has played his way to Pittsburgh. He will continue in a few days his journey southward with his violin, and what Ysaye and his own passion for the instrument have given him will pay the way.

Acres in Cotton Plant

Erivan, Armenia.—American methods of cotton growing are being introduced in Armenia.

A new cotton factory, equipped with modern American machinery, has just been completed in Erivan.

At the present time, more than 40,000 acres of cotton are under cultivation. This is 40 times greater than the acreage under cultivation in 1921.

The Armenian government expects this year to produce 100,000 pounds of raw cotton. One factory in Erivan now produces 100,000 pounds a month.

In order to encourage farmers to cultivate their own cotton fields, the government is allowing them large quantities of free seed. The government pays $275 for 40 pounds of the raw material. The present average yield is about 1000 pounds an acre.

BALANCE IN MILK TRADE

Keep Supply and Demand Close Enough So That Surplus Will Not Be Problem.

Syracuse, Nov. 14.—Speaking here before the forty-eighth annual meeting of the New York State Dairy-men's association, Professor H. A. Ross of the state college of agriculture at Cornell university, said that one of the chief difficulties confronting milk producers and dealers is that of determining equitable prices that will properly reflect supply and demand conditions.

To intelligently arrive at a price, he said, both production and consumption must be considered, as well as the surplus milk that must be carried in order to have a safe margin for doing business. He thinks that many times in the past errors have been made both ways in setting a price; too low a price cutting production below the needs of the market, and too high a price causing an over-supply.

The demand for milk in a large city changes greatly, he said, because of people actually leaving town. Because of temperature changes, and according to the day of the week. Contrary to popular opinion, said Professor Ross, changes in retail prices do not greatly affect the demand for milk if the prices are held within reasonable limits.

He concluded by pointing out how great an effect surplus milk has on the general price level. A certain amount is necessary to do business on a margin of safety, but the aim of both producers and dealers should be to adjust prices as to have as little as possible of this extra overhead charge carried by the trade.

COURSES OFFERED
IN PUBLIC HEALTH

Correspondence School Conducted by Institutions.

Washington.—Correspondence and reading courses in public health have been conducted by seven state departments of health and by six universities in this country in the last two years, according to the United States public health service, which for more than a year has been collecting data on the subject from the executive officers of state departments of health and from the directors of the various correspondence schools.

Of the courses given by departments of health, five are for sanitarians—those conducted in Kansas, Illinois, Ohio, New Mexico and Pennsylvania. In addition, the Virginia state health department offers a correspondence course for teachers; in both Virginia and Minnesota a course is given in the hygiene of maternity and infancy for mothers, and a second course is offered in Pennsylvania, one for persons connected with industries, schools and with civic and religious organizations.

In no case is tuition charged for the courses conducted by state departments of health, says a summary of the survey. "Minigraphed or printed lessons are distributed in several instances, and in two cases, textbooks are used. Those taking the course are required to answer questions by mail from time to time, in four or five installments in connection with each lesson. The number enrolled varies a great deal, so also does the length of course.

Some Courses for Laymen. "The correspondence courses offered by universities are in five instances conducted by the extension division of the university and in one case by the department of hygiene. One university conducts only one course, two conduct two courses, two, four courses, and one conducts seven courses. Most courses appeared to be offered primarily for those who are now or intend to be engaged in public health work, although a few courses apparently are for laymen.

"In all cases tuition is charged, textbooks are used and examinations given. Academic credit is granted for all courses, except in one university, where credit is given when the student is enrolled in the school of medicine. The length of courses varies from 20 to 40 lessons. While the courses offered by universities may have a more dignified status than those offered by state departments of health, the number of students enrolled is not large.

"The Ohio state department of health has prepared a course, with the assistance of the International Health board, for persons employed in public health work on a full-time or part-time basis, not including, however, nurses. The work requires one year, but no definite time is set for completing it. The Kansas state board of health, which also received assistance from the International Health board, established in January, 1923, a correspondence course for sanitarians (mostly part-time county health officers). Of the 107 who enrolled the entire number completed the course. The course was repeated in 1924.

"The bureau of public health of the department of public welfare of New Mexico organized for city and county health officers a correspondence course in 1920, consisting of 40 lessons given at weekly intervals. The course was taken by 50 persons. The work has not been conducted in a systematic way since 1920. The Virginia state board of health operates two correspondence courses, one for teachers and one for mothers.

Free Courses for Mothers.

"The Minnesota state board of health, through its division of child hygiene, conducts a correspondence course in the hygiene of maternity and infancy.

"The Pennsylvania department of health, through its division of public health education, has conducted two courses which it designated as correspondence courses.

"The University of Chicago maintains a large home study department. Seven courses are given in the department of hygiene and bacteriology.

"The University of Wisconsin at present offers through its extension division approximately four courses—two for mothers and women generally, one for nurses and one for health officers. The University of Arkansas announces through its general extension divisions courses in the following subjects: child hygiene, emergency war, mother and child hygiene, emergency war, mother and child hygiene.

"The University of Kansas announces through its correspondence study department a non-credit course in home health and home nursing, which is taken by many women over the state. The University of Tennessee, through its department of hygiene, offered in January, 1923, a correspondence course in personal and community hygiene.

"The University of Tennessee, through its department of hygiene, offered in January, 1923, a correspondence course in personal and community hygiene.

DIES SUDDENLY AT BARN

Benjamin Henry Sisson of Rogers Hollow Found Unconscious on Doorstep Could Be Summoned.

Unadilla, Nov. 14.—Benjamin Henry Sisson was found unconscious in his barn at Rogers Hollow near here this morning by his wife, and died before Dr. Hymer of this village could reach his side. He had suffered from heart disease for some time but his death comes as a shock not only to his family, but to his many friends here as well, who will join in expression of sympathy to the family.

Funeral services will be held from his late home Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with Rev. William Kent of the Friends church, officiating. Burial will be made at Unadilla Center.

Surviving Mr. Sisson are his wife, four sons, Vernon Sisson of Unadilla Center, William and Laverne Sisson of Rogers Hollow, and Harold Sisson who lived at home, two daughters, Mrs. Belle DeForest of Rogers Hollow and Mrs. Harry Sisson of Wells Bridge, a sister, Miss Nellie Sisson of Sherburne, two brothers, David and Adelbert Sisson of Sherburne, and 15 grandchildren.

Mr. Sisson went to the barn this morning, apparently in good health, at about 10:30 o'clock, to do some chores. It was only shortly later that Mrs. Sisson saw the train come out of the barn without Mr. Sisson and felt that something was unusual. She investigated and found Mr. Sisson lying on the floor, apparently unconscious and with one eye. He was carried into the home and Dr. Hymer called. However, all life had left when he was able to reach the farm.

Mr. Sisson was born at North Norwich, November 26, 1858, the son of Alfred and Ellen Evans Sisson. He was later married to Cora Crandall of Plymouth who survives him. They lived at Sherburne for a time until about 20 years ago when they came to Unadilla Center, living there for a time and then purchasing the George Pike farm at Rogers Hollow, which since has been their home.

Mrs. Sisson was a respected and well known resident of the vicinity and her loss will be widely mourned. Mrs. Belle Sackett of Oneonta, sister of Mrs. Sisson arrived here this evening to be with her sister in her bereavement.

Like the big Paige—Jewett outperforms others. Beats them in hill climbing. Gets away faster. Pulls easier in high through bad going. Throttles down to a 2-mile-an-hour crawl then gets away in a flash. Yes—Jewett does all these things. And because its motor is big, amply powered without wearing speed—Jewett's life is long. Its marvelous performance outlasts that of smaller, higher-speed motors!

And Jewett is husky throughout—hundreds of pounds more of strength than others its size. You buy long-lived, trouble-free, fine performance in Jewett!
